

Joe Biden closes in on presidency, strait gap in Pennsylvania, Georgia against Trump

US courts have dissolved the Trump campaign's lawsuits in Michigan and Georgia linked to alleged electoral malpractice. In Michigan, the campaign had looked to stop the sum-up of absentee ballots, while in Georgia it had alleged that even immoral ballots were being counted.

Michigan Court of announced Judge Cynthia Stephens Thursday released the legal action, declaring that the Michigan Secretary of State is not involved with the local counting affairs. On Friday a legal order would be issued.
