

Apple Watch Series 7 Tipped to Be Completely Redesigned With Flat Edges Similar To The iPhone 12 Series.

Apple Watch Series 7 is rumoured in the market to come with a redesign and with some amazing features like flat edges similar to the iPhone 12 series. The new model could also be examined in multiple great colour options, including a special green shade.

Some suppliers suggesting the changes in the Apple Watch Series 7 model design over the existing models have also surfaced online, hinting at what the Cupertino company could unveil sometime later in 2021. The last redesigning was considered in the Apple Watch family back in September 2018 with the launch of the Apple Watch Series 4.

Tipster Jon Prosser has shared the purported details about Apple Watch Series 7. He said in a video posted on his YouTube account that he has brought some renders to suggest the design of the new Apple Watch on the basis of the real images and CAD file he sourced from people familiar with the development. The renderings are, however, created by concept artist Ian Zelbo.

One of the major changes that Prosser has suggested is flat edges on Apple Watch Series 7. He suggested that the screen sizes on the new Apple Watch may just be similar to what we had on the Apple Watch Series 6. However, he did mention that Apple even tested some smaller bezels and larger display areas.

Apple is said to be experimenting with multiple colour options for the Apple Watch Series 7. One of the most distinctive colours could be a green hue that is expected to be similar to the green colour option available on the AirPods Max.

Prosser said that he did not receive any codename details, thus the leaked model could just be the Apple Watch Series 8 and not the Series 7. However, he also said that considering the recent reports, including the prediction made by Apple analyst Ming-Chi Kuo, a redesigned Apple Watch could be unveiled in 2021. Apple is likely to bring the Apple Watch Series 7 sometime in September this year.