

POCO X3 GT Confirmed Launch On 28 July

Poco X3 GT will launch in Malaysia on July 28, the company confirmed via various social media posts. According to rumours, Poco is again launching a rebranded Redmi smartphone in the market.

Now, a new leak has surfaced online that reveals the renders as well as some of the key features of the Poco X3 GT. It also carries the same design language as Redmi Note 10 Pro 5G which was launched in the China market. Some details about the Poco X3 GT smartphone have surfaced online, along with the design renders.

The Poco X3 GT will be powered by the MediaTek Dimensity 1100 SoC and will support 67W turbocharging. There is a slight chin at the bottom and a rectangular shaped camera module on the back. According to rumours, the main camera will have a 64-megapixel lens. At the rear, there is a vertical camera setup on the top left housing three sensors and an LED flash. The device will have a slim form factor with narrow bezels all around.

It is expected that the launch will be in three colours – Black, Green, and White. Among the three, the Green and White colour options have a textured back. The phone is seen to have volume rockers and power buttons on the right spine.

The Redmi Note 10 Pro 5G is priced at 1499 yuan (Rs 17,040 approx.) for the 6GB RAM with 128GB storage version. The 8GB RAM with 128GB storage version is priced at 1799 yuan (Rs 20,460 approx.). The 8GB RAM with 256GB storage version costs 1999 yuan (Rs 22,720 approx.).

It was also leaked that the Redmi Note 10 Pro 5G could launch in India as the Poco X3 GT. If the X3 GT will be a Redmi Note

10 Pro, then its pricing will be starting around Rs 20,000. It comes in Green, White and Blue colours.